About Kevin

Kevin is a California native with an undergraduate degree in Social Sciences from the University of Southern California. After graduation, he moved to Denver, Colorado in 1995. In 2008, after a successful career in marketing and sales, he enrolled at Regis University for a Master of Marriage and Family Therapy degree. He graduated in 2011 as part of the first class to graduate from their program. After earning his Master's, he worked for the Arapaho Douglas Mental Health Network as an in-home therapist, crisis evaluator, outpatient therapist, case manager for over three years in the Child and Family Services division. He also worked part-time for The Bridge House, ADMHN's Acute Treatment Unit, as a Counselor and Mental Health Technician.

In 2014, Kevin opened his private practice, Petersen Family Counseling, where he specializes in working with individuals and families that are struggling with codependency, parents, and addiction.
